

" Exchange Rates and Term Structures "

Yu-chin Chen

Abstract

This talk combines theoretical and empirical results from three papers, illustrating the connection between nominal exchange rate movements and information in the term structure of assets, including the yield curves, foreign exchange options, and credit default swaps. The findings support the view that exchange rate movements are not disconnected from fundamentals but depend crucially on their expectations and perceived risk, including its asymmetry and proximity.